TUESDAY, JUNE 11, 1901.

South Carolina is now looked upon as the home of cussers and quitters.

Several Oklahoma statesmen are on the verge of turning in a call for the political ambulance.

Up to the present time the Hon. "Fatty" Smith continues to be the latest victim of the political hollow mask.

Up in the Cherokee strip the gentlemen who measure the halftones for publication are now getting in their work.

As per announcement in our local columns it will be noted that the great pie syndicate will shortly open headquarters in Washington.

That Indiana judge who declared it to be all right to open a jackpot with a counterfeit coin will carry himself to such extremes as to make the attempt some day to open his court with a can opener or a bung starter.

Amos Ewing has not yet decided to segregate himself from his oil inspectorship job, but promises to give the matter "due consideration" at the proper time.

The presence of Amos Ewing in the city denotes that he has not yet deodorized himself from the four years' contract with kerosene, greatly to the regret of politicians who are casting envious eyes at the growing bank account of the prosperous inspector.

THAT COMMERCIAL LOVE FEAST.

If our commercial travelers now in London have quite recovered from the hysteria incident to the banquet in the Tallow-Chandlers' or the Fishmongers' hall—or some other old hall—on Wednesday evening last, perhaps we may in due time receive a rational explanation of the fuss and tears and gulps and osculation that characterized the incident in question. Thus far we know only that a lot of New York merchants met a lot of London merchants at the feast board—in the hall above referred to—and that after consuming in truly Homeric fashion vast quantities of those well known British delicacies, turtle, turbot, beef, veal, tripe, and plum pudding, together with the usual liquids, they fell upon each other's necks and became comrades forevermore.

Of course, there is something real, if not quite explicable, in the warmth with which Englishmen and Americans of corresponding social or professional rank meet each other everywhere. There must be some powerful if silent affinity that puts them on mutually easy terms once the barrier of reserve is passed. After all, they are descended from a common source. Their civilization, their ideas, their concepts of human liberty, and their dreams of human progress differ very little if at all. In the two countries the patrician and the yeoman, the merchant and the tradesman, the evangelist, the statesman, the pirate, and the wrecker have pretty much the same standards, convictions, methods, and appetites. In both countries there are gentlemen, financiers, rowdies, snobs, pirates, hypocrites, and hucksters, with mighty little choice between them in their respective classes. The differences are purely superficial—wrought by climate, custom, and environment. The resemblances are racial and intrinsic. Under ordinary circumstances we accept the gush, the effusion, and the gluttony as being logical enough. This particular affair, however, was extraordinary. It transgressed the limits of the purely personal demonstration and took on the character of an international compact. Not only the individuals, but the countries and their governments were to be twins for all time to come. Mr. Carnegie, who seems to imagine that his wealth carries with it the gifts of intuition and of prophecy, declared that in 1898

England had saved the United States from a hostile European combination, and that the American people would at some future time requite this service by defending England against a similar conspiracy. The speech of the banquet—or such of it as was intelligible—took its tone from this oracular deliverance. The incident masqueraded in the garb of destiny.

Thus, we are waiting for an explanation which seems to be necessary to our peace of mind. Meanwhile, the two peoples will jog along in the old familiar way, liking each other very heartily as individuals and watching each other's governments with a sour eye.

COMMISSIONERS REVERSED.

Judge Burford Hands Down Decision in the Black Case.

Judge Burford has rendered an opinion in the M. S. Black Liquor License appeal case of the Anti-Saloon league. The hearing came up yesterday in chambers. Judge Burford reversed the decision of the board of county commissioners upon two grounds:

First—Because the evidence was sufficient to disclose, or show that Mrs. Black was a retail licensed dealer in liquor at a place known as the "Victor Bar," during the year 1900. That the law had been violated in the following manner: The view being obstructed by a bar screen and painted windows.

The GOLF GIRL

Is the type of the modern woman at her healthiest and best. She walks with an easy grace. She is a picture of perfect womanhood in the springtime of life. But generally the golf club is laid aside with marriage. A physical languor oppresses the once athletic girl. Exercise makes her back ache. She tires easily. Usually she accepts this condition as a natural thing, but it is unnatural. Marriage should add to woman's happiness, rather than subtract from it. If women understood how intimately the general health is related to the local health of the womanly organs, they would appreciate the fact that there is no need to suffer from weakness and backache. The use of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong, sick women well. It regulates the periods, heals inflammation and ulceration, cures female weakness, and puts the body in a condition of sound health.

Mrs. H. A. Alcock, of Austin, Texas, writes: "After five months of great suffering with female weakness, I write for the benefit of other sufferers from the same affliction. I doctored with our family physician without any good results, so my husband urged me to try Dr. Pierce's medicine—which I did with wonderful results. I am completely cured. I took four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, four of his Golden Medical Discovery, and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets.'" had no power and were not authorized to approve such bond.

The petition of the league regarding the slot machine was not sustained for the reason that the kind of slot machine was not specifically stated.

By this decision Mrs. Black can not get a license to operate the wholesale business of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing company for which firm she is the agent.

TODAY'S MARKETS.

Rumors of Damage to Crops Greatly Exaggerated.

Special to Daily Leader.

New York, June 11.—The selling of stocks since the middle of last week has to a considerable extent been predicted upon reported deterioration in the condition of the growing crops. The government crop report issued yesterday afternoon confirms this fact, but is in evidence from the report that many of the rumors that the crop damage has been exaggerated. As regards spring wheat, a considerable reduction in acreage is estimated but this is offset by a much higher percentage of average condition on June 1st as compared with a year ago. Winter wheat shows a considerable decline in condition from May 18, but a much better condition on June 1st a year ago and a really important improvement over the percentage of the mean average condition of the last 10 years. The average condition of oats is not as favorable when compared with previous years, but there is a comparatively small percentage of decrease in the average sown when this is compared with the average sown when this was of last year. In the main it seems to be agreed in the grain trade that the government report is much more favorable than had been expected. It may also be noted that some improvement has been brought about since June 1st by rains and better weather conditions generally in the West.
